OHS Induction for Construction (White Card Course)

This course is compulsory for all people wishing to work within the Building and Construction Industry. It is also known in the NSW construction Industry as the White Card course (previously known as green card). The White card is valid for all construction sites in Australia.

This course meets WorkCover NSW requirements for OHS induction training for construction work and covers the nationally recognised unit of competency - Work Safely in the Construction Industry (CPCCOHS1001A). It is required by the NSW Occupational Health and Safety (OHS) Regulation and supported by the National Code of Practice for Induction Training for Construction Work (ASCC 2006).

Course content

This course aims to give participants the basic OHS knowledge needed before working in the construction industry.

The topics in this course are:

1. OHS legislative requirements.
2. Construction hazards and control measures.
3. OHS communication and reporting processes.
4. OHS incident response procedures.

Who should attend this course?

This course is designed for people who are about to start work in the construction industry or those workers currently carrying out construction work in NSW who are required to update their evidence of industry induction training. It is a mandatory requirement by WorkCover NSW to enable work to be carried out in the construction industry.

How is course content covered?

Course content is covered via formal training in the classroom.

How long does it take to complete the course?

Six (6) hours face to face training in the classroom. This includes assessment activities.

Where are courses delivered?
